Abstract

Though the political history of India is long, ideologies of zonal policy can be found in ancient Hindu literature. Zone is a circle. The kingdom zone is a political circle of twelve kings. Kings and their various forces move back and forth on a round chessboard, cutting each other apart and working together for war or peace in a different way for ultimate victory. This zonal policy is seen in the context of contemporary geopolitical similarities. This study, entitled A Study of Contemporary Geopolitics in the State Zonal Policy Proposed by the Ancient Hindu Literatures, sets the stage for comparison. Performed as a descriptive study and historical study methodology as appropriate. Relations with countries are not always the same but different. It can be considered as a good relationship and a bad relationship. Enemy to enemy, friend to friend, friend to nature, enemy to nature, strong state can aim at things that are compatible.
