Literature Review
Homestay Tourism
Tourism is one of the largest and fastest growing industries today. With its rapid growth, a diversification of tourism products and destinations is taking place, consequently, demanding new alternative types of tourism, e.g. small-scale nature related and rural 'experience' tourism. Within the total world market for tourism, rural tourism forms a relatively small sector but is of growing importance (Mohamad, et al., 2013). According to Mohomad (2013) emphasized the homestay programme is a form of alternative tourism in which tourists are given the opportunity to experience the way of life of host country village. The experiential nature of this form of tourism is becoming increasingly popular with both foreign and domestic tourists.

Homestay referring to a visit to the home of someone in a foreign country that allows visitors to rent a room from a local family to learn the local culture, lifestyle, or language. It is a living arrangement offered by a host or host family that involves staying in a furnished house or suite. Homestay guests will stay at home like accommodation with shared living spaces, facilities and amenities. Utilities and meals are usually included, and the length of stay can be daily, weekly, monthly, or unlimited unless otherwise specified by the host (Lynch, 1998). And, Homestay as the term suggests means staying in someone’s home. Homestay is a home of “a dwelling place together with a family unit that occupies it – household”. Homestay provides a unique opportunity to experience the way of life of the local people of an area along with the indigenous and traditional cultures within a comfortable homely setting (Boonratana, 2010). Additionally, Paul Lynch (2009) gave a broader definition of Homestay by referring it as commercial homes whereby visitors or guests pay to stay in private homes where interaction take place with a host or family (Lynch, 1998).

Homestay Tourism Entrepreneurs
Entrepreneurship emphasizes opportunities to create and operate businesses and organizations. Further, entrepreneurship has a significant influence on the evolution of tourist destinations. In simple terms, entrepreneurs conceive an innovative idea or see an opportunity and pursue it, resulting in them establishing a business. Such behavior explains the influence of entrepreneurs on tourism development (Jaafar, et al., 2015). Based on past researches can emphasized the reasons for the high prevalence of small businesses in tourism include the fact that smaller businesses can often be established with a minimum of capital, there are few specific prerequisite qualifications for most tourism-related businesses, businesses can be localized, and the owner-managers are generally families (Morrison, et al., 1999). Accordingly, the entrepreneur is viewed as a person who either creates new combinations of production, or as a person who is willing to take risks, organizing and reorganizing of social and economic mechanisms, or as a person who, by exploiting market opportunities, eliminates disequilibrium between supply and demand, or as one who owns and operates a business (Mohamad, et al., 2013).

Homestay has generated much revenue to the main provider of lodging through the arrival of guest staying in the room offered in the Homestay programme. There are also spillover effects to the community in terms of employment and business opportunities. It has also created employment as some of the Homestay operators could hire someone within the community to assist in operating the Homestay for example. The evolution of Homestay has shown to successfully becoming a catalyst for socio-cultural and economic development to the rural community development.

The development of Homestay programme has been seen to be attractive and moving forward to the right direction for the benefits of the local community. Some research studies that have investigated on the challenges encompassing the Homestay operators and local community managed to highlight several possible challenges (Pusira & Xiao, 2013).

Entrepreneurial Factors

Entrepreneurial factors can identify as pull and push factors. Entrepreneurs are people who have developed the ability to see and evaluate business opportunities, to gather the necessary resources, to take advantage of the resources gathered, and to initiate an appropriate action plan to ensure success not only but also an entrepreneur could be operationally defined as an individual person who sets up a business or businesses, taking on financial risk for the principal purposes of profit and growth, who is characterized principally by innovative behavior, and employs strategic management practices in the business. (Gartner,1986). Synthetically, Entrepreneur is a person who that action-oriented, highly motivated individuals who take on risks to achieve the goals of the business.
